That information will announced in 2015. I refer you to the phased enforcement plan published in 2012 (<http://www.dhs.gov/real-id-enforcement-brief>):

Phase 4: Boarding federally regulated commercial aircraft. A driver's license or identification card from a noncompliant state may only be used in conjunction with an acceptable second form of ID for boarding federally regulated commercial aircraft.

DHS will conduct an evaluation following the implementation of the first three phases to assess the effects of enforcement and the progress of states in meeting the standards of the act. Before a date for Phase 4 is set, DHS will conduct an evaluation to inform a fair and achievable timeline. The date for implementing Phase 4 will be set after the evaluation has been complete; this phase will occur no sooner than 2016. The evaluation will also be used to inform the nature and timing of subsequent phases and to inform the pathway to full enforcement. DHS will ensure the public has ample advanced notice before identification requirements for boarding aircraft or entering additional types of Federal facilities change.

Best Wishes,

Hi,

I was on the GSA auction site and I see that the Real ID law applies to access federal places where auction items might be inspected or picked up after purchase. I know Montana driver's licenses do not meet the requirement as a Real ID.

My question is this: Is my military retired ID considered a Real ID for the purpose of accessing federal installations. If it is, maybe you could add that information to your web site.

Thanks, hope your day goes well.

Okay, let's go ahead and schedule it for December 4th at 2pm EST if that works for everybody. Ted, I will need a bio from you (and/or any other DHS presenter). I'll also need an e-mail address where we can send the log-in information for the webinar if different from the OSIIS one I've been using. As I understand the format from (b)(6) you aren't allowed to be on a panel together but (b)(6) can sort of moderate the discussion and ask questions following a presentation from Ted/DHS. Is that how it will work? We typically open up for questions from webinar viewers at the end of the hour. When we do so, we can have them type their questions directly into the GoToWebinar interface and I can collate those here and read them out for the appropriate person to respond to. That system usually works better than trying to unmute people to have them voice their questions and potentially subject ourselves to feedback or other audio problems. I hope that works for everybody. Let me know if anyone has any logistical or format questions and if anyone has any suggestions for how we need to promote the event and everyone's participation in it. I'll be working up a blurb to add to our webinar registration page.

Also, we had initially been looking at a late October date but it sounds like November is going to work better for a number of reasons. I'd like to aim for November 18, 19 or 20. We usually try to do our webinars at around 2pm ET, which allows folks in all time zones to participate and everything. Let me know if one of those dates would work best for you and/or your team.

The REAL ID Act, passed by Congress in 2005, enacted the 9/11 Commission's recommendation that the Federal Government "set standards for the issuance of sources of identification, such as driver's licenses." The Act established minimum security standards for license issuance and production and prohibits Federal agencies from accepting for certain purposes driver's licenses and identification cards from states not meeting the Act's minimum standards. The purposes covered by the Act are: accessing Federal facilities, entering nuclear power plants, and, no sooner than 2016, boarding federally regulated commercial aircraft.

The REAL ID Act does not require individuals to present identification where it is not currently required to access a Federal facility (such as to enter the public areas of the Smithsonian) nor does it prohibit an agency from accepting other forms of identity documents other than documents from non-compliant states (such as a U.S. passport or passport card).

The Act's prohibitions do not affect other uses of driver's licenses or identification cards – including licenses and cards from noncompliant states – unrelated to official purposes as defined in the Act. For example, the Act does not apply to voting, registering to vote, or for applying for or receiving Federal benefits.

In general, the REAL ID regulations require the name on a driver's license or identification card to be the same as the name on the source identity document presented by the applicant to establish identity. Where a state permits an applicant to establish a name other than the name that appears on a source document (e.g., through marriage, adoption, court order, or other mechanism permitted by state law or regulation), the state shall require evidence of the name change through the presentation of documents issued by a court, governmental body, or other entity as determined by the state. This requirement is intended to document the connection between an applicant's previous legal name that is displayed on the source identity document presented and the current legal name used by the same individual that will be displayed on the new driver's license or identification card to be issued. REAL ID only establishes minimum standards for the issuance of driver's licenses and identification cards. The policies and procedures for issuing driver's licenses and identification cards is under the authority of the state and any questions regarding those procedures as it relates to how names are listed on driver's licenses should be directed to your state.

Subject: Changing names after marriage
Importance: High

I do not understand why women are being forced to take both of their husbands last names! This serves NO real purpose at all related to identifying me. If my name is (b)(6) today and I get married. I show up with the marriage license and change my name to (b)(6) (b)(6) you know who I was being called and who I am now being call. You have my address, DOB, height, weight, eye color etc and corresponding documents related to the change are in the computer. How does taking his mother's maiden name help you identify me????? Everyone at the DMV knows why Latinos have 2 last names and what they mean, if we are going to do it the Latino way I would get to keep my family name and take just (b)(6) instead of (b)(6) (his last name) (b)(6) (his mother's maiden name).

You really need to revise this because all you are accomplishing is that women are not changing their name and therefore you don't even know who she is married to unless you have time to go through all the daily records of marriage in every city and every state to make sure everyone's name is up to date!!! Don't you think that is a bigger problem???

DHS requires visitors to present government-issued identification for access to its facilities. For visitors presenting a state-issued driver's license or identification card, DHS may only accept such documents if they are issued by states that are REAL ID compliant. If the state that issued your license is listed as noncompliant, please bring an alternate form of government-issued photo ID -- such as a passport or Federal employee, military, or veteran identification card to facilitate access.

REAL ID is solely concerned with state-issued identification.

Veterans IDs issued by the Federal Government are not affected by REAL ID.

Federal agencies may -- if they so choose in accordance with their own policy -- accept Veterans ID for access to Federal facilities.

While traveling, your U.S. passport remains a commonly accepted form of ID. The REAL ID Act does not change that practice.

You will need to contact your state department of motor vehicles to determine what documents you will need to provide for future driver's license renewals.

Good morning!

I just became aware of the Read ID issue from an article in the Homeland Security News Wire.

I am a US citizen residing in Spain, although my official residence is in (b)(6) area, Texas.

I have a valid Texas Drivers License for which, at the last renewal I submitted a color copy of my passport (issued through the US Embassy in Madrid, Spain), medical documentation and confirmation of my residence in the (b)(6)

I am also registered at the US Embassy in Madrid - with my physical address in Spain as well as telephone number and this e-mail address.

Is there anything else that I need to do to have an iron clad ID?

I fully support these efforts by our government. The times that we are living through certainly demand it!

Thank you for your assistance in this matter.

Hello,

I am curious as to when the date is required to have the Real ID for domestic commercial flights. Your website states no earlier than the year of 2016, however my state government (<http://dps.alabama.gov/Home/wfContent.aspx?ID=80&PLH1=plhDriverLicense-StarIDStar>) is stating that I'll need to have one by December 1st 2014 based on my birthdate being after December 1st 1964. I tried calling our state government's license office for clarification, and they said to refer to the Department of Homeland Security. I have a flight on December 12th 2014, so I wanted to know if I need this ID or not. Is the ID verification done at the state or the federal level?

Thank you,

I have had a Florida Drivers license for over thirty years. Now I am reduced to being a lawbreaker because a document I was given “permanent residency card” which has no expiration date is no longer valid. I have included a pdf of my permanent residency card. Currently the TSA accepts our tribal identification card at airports. We are wanting to know if the Real-ID act effects federally recognized tribes and if so what steps we would need to take to ensure that our tribal id's are compliant.

While REAL ID prohibits Federal agencies from accepting driver's licenses from noncompliant states for official purposes, enforcement of this prohibition is being rolled out incrementally in phases. The exact date for enforcement at airports has not yet been determined, but will not occur before 2016. DHS will ensure the public has ample advanced notice before identification requirements for boarding aircraft change. That notice will include information on the process for individuals with a non-compliant driver's license or identification card to be able to travel by aircraft.

The Transportation Security Administration (TSA) currently accepts driver's licenses and state-issued identification cards from all states and will continue to do so, at least, until 2016. For more information on acceptable forms of identification for boarding aircraft, please see TSA's website (<http://www.tsa.gov/traveler-information/acceptable-ids>)

I do not understand why women are being forced to take both of their husbands last names! This serves NO real purpose at all related to identifying me. If my name is (b)(6) today and I get married. I show up with the marriage license and change my name to (b)(6) (b)(6) you know who I was being called and who I am now being call. You have my address, DOB, height, weight, eye color etc and corresponding documents related to the change are in the computer. How does taking his mother's maiden name help you identify me????? Everyone at the DMV knows why Latinos have 2 last names and what they mean, if we are going to do it the Latino way I would get to keep my family name and take just (b)(6) instead of (b)(6) his last name (b)(6) (his mother's maiden name).

You really need to revise this because all you are accomplishing is that women are not changing their name and therefore you don't even know who she is married to unless you have time to go through all the daily records of marriage in every city and every state to make sure everyone's name is up to date!!! Don't you think that is a bigger problem???

DHS requires visitors to present government-issued identification for access to its facilities. For visitors presenting a state-issued driver's license or identification card, DHS may only accept such documents if they are issued by states that are REAL ID compliant. If the state that issued your license is listed as noncompliant, please bring an alternate form of government-issued photo ID – such as a passport or Federal employee, military, or veteran identification card to facilitate access.

Subject: License to be used for boarding aircraft

Good morning,

I recently renewed my license for the state of Vermont, but because of the inability to provide enough paperwork for the physical address at the time, I was issued a non-federal identification license. My current license expires at the end of October and I am flying to California in November, so will be using this new license for the first time to board a flight. I know from the outline that Real IDs are not required until 2016 by TSA, but wanted to be sure that with this Non Federal Identification license I currently have, there will be no problems using this as my ID for TSA security? I don't currently have any other ID as my passport expired last December. I have attached a scan of the license in case that helps.

Thank you,

Good afternoon,

My name is Lenzy Krehbiel-Burton and I'm a reporter with the Native American Times, which is based out of northeastern Oklahoma.

In light of a looming enforcement deadline for the REAL ID act and Oklahoma's decision several years ago to not comply with the law, there's been more discussion publicly about what will and will not count as acceptable identification once the law's provisions take effect. I'm working on a story about whether photo identification cards issued by any of Oklahoma's tribes meet the requirements under the REAL ID act.

Homeland Security's website only lists states and territories, so I'd like to know what standards a tribal citizenship card would have to meet in order to be considered in compliance with the REAL ID act and, if you happen have a list of tribes that meet those requirements, that would also be greatly appreciated.

Wado,

Lenzy Krehbiel-Burton

Good Morning,

My 83 year old Mother In Law renewed her drivers license this year March 2014. She received a flyer advising she needs to bring 3 pieces of identification to have the "gold star" put on her license by the end of this year. I called our local agency this morning and the lady I spoke with advised that people are misinterpreting that flyer. She advised that since my Mother In Law was born prior to 1965 she does not have to have the gold star put on her license until she renews in 2017. Is this accurate? Is there a link on your website indicating this information that I can print out to show her?

Department of Homeland Security Representative,

I am a citizen of the United States and a citizen of Massachusetts for 53 years. I have a question on the recent article that I will paste below on the (A) Noncompliant States/Territories and those that are listed as (B) Compliant/Extension States/Territories.

<http://www.dhs.gov/real-id-enforcement-brief>

My state of Massachusetts appears on the (A) Noncompliant States/Territories.

Does this mean that my state drivers license is "Non-compliant" for any identification purposes by DHS?

IF so, How do I acquire a "Compliant" license for my drivers license identification by Massachusetts?

Do you know if Massachusetts is working on being "Compliant" for DHS?

What else can I do to be compliant or other forms of Identification that are compliant to DHS. My passport is out of date at this time but will get one updated if necessary for identification if the drivers license is not accepted by DHS if I take a flight to another state.

I am confused as to how I need the compliance and the "illegals from the Texas/ Mexico and other countries borders do not need one". If they are being sent to Massachusetts then I would think they need "Compliant" drivers licenses. How do I get one if they have one? Very confusing at this point for my air travels ahead. Does Governor Duvall Patrick need to be notified by DHS for all Massachusetts residents to comply?

(Also note that there is no + sign next to my state of Massachusetts) The plus sign or + in the lower notes on your form state;

+Federal officials may continue to accept Enhanced Driver's Licenses from these states.

Please advise at your convenience.

Because Virginia and DC both has asterisks (meaning, has an extension (renewable)) are those states good in the near future? How would we know for sure? I don't want to get in a bind and not be able to get an employee onsite.

The site doesn't indicate that we wouldn't be ok but I don't understand what the renewable extension means so I wanted to make sure.

No. REAL ID does not create a requirement to check an ID for accessing a Federal facility where that requirement does not exist.

REAL ID is a mandate on the Federal Government that prohibits Federal agencies from accepting driver's licenses for official purposes unless DHS determines that a state meets defined minimum standards for the issuance and production of driver's licenses.

Do you know if there will be a requirement mandated for the State of Arizona to become compliant regarding the use of Drivers Licenses as identification to access Federal Buildings such as NASA Facilities?

I do not know. My office only works with state-issued driver's licenses and identification cards.

If you suspect fraud, I recommend contacting the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

DHS requires visitors to present government-issued identification for access to its facilities. For visitors presenting a state-issued driver's license or identification card, DHS may only accept such documents if they are issued by states that are REAL ID compliant. If the state that issued your license is listed as noncompliant, please bring an alternate form of government-issued photo ID – such as a passport or Federal employee, military, or veteran identification card to facilitate access.

“The Transportation Security Administration (TSA) will continue to accept driver's licenses and state-issued identification cards from all jurisdictions no earlier than 2016.”

Just a suggestion.

REAL ID establishes Federal minimum standards for the secure issuance and production of state-issued identification (including both driver's licenses and non-driver identification cards). It does not create a new kind of ID issued by the Federal Government.

States that are otherwise compliant with the REAL ID standards may choose to also issue noncompliant cards (i.e., cards issued with the required proof and verification of name, social security number, primary address, or lawful status). Both compliant and noncompliant cards are issued by each state's department of motor vehicles.

I would suggest that you contact your state department of motor vehicles to inquire about the availability and cost of a noncompliant card.

I hope that this information is helpful.

To Whom It May Concern:

I work at a level 3 facility for people with severe mental illness. There are times when they have been homeless and have lost all forms of identification. We send away for certified birth certificates and insurance cards to get a non-compliant id. I have not found any information on any govt. site about the cost of a non-compliant id. I have found information about a non-driver id. Is that the same? If not, how much does a non-compliant id cost?

The REAL ID Act prohibits Federal agencies from accepting driver's licenses from noncompliant states for purpose of accessing a Federal facility, entering a nuclear power plant and (no sooner than 2016) boarding a federally-regulated commercial aircraft. It does not establish what forms of ID agencies may accept in lieu of a driver's license from a noncompliant state. That policy is at the discretion of each agency.

While agencies generally accept U.S. passports and passport cards for identification purposes, I would recommend that you inquire directly with the agency responsible for the Federal facility that you wish to access about what their policies are for alternate IDs.

Is there anything I can do to obtain an alternate ID? Would a passport or passport card work?

Your question is best directed to the U.S. Customs and Border Protection, which oversees re-entry to the United States.

The Western Hemisphere Travel Initiative (WHTI) governs document requirements for border crossings. U.S. citizens entering the United States at sea or land ports of entry are required to present a WHTI-compliant document such as a valid passport, U.S. passport card, Trusted Traveler Program card (NEXUS, SENTRI, Global Entry or FAST), or an Enhanced Driver's License.

Florida is not one of the five states that issues Enhanced Driver's Licenses.

The security guard was not mistaken.

New York is not in compliance with the requirements of the REAL ID Act of 2005. As such, Federal agencies are prohibited from accepting ID cards issued by New York for purpose of accessing Federal facilities. For more information, see the REAL ID webpage.

Each agency may establish its own policies governing what other forms of ID it accepts or whether it has a process for visitor's without acceptable identification. We encourage you to contact the facility in question to inquire about their policies.

You will need to check with the agencies you want to visit. REAL ID does not direct agencies what to accept, only when they cannot accept a state-issued driver's license or identification card.

Generally, most agencies accept passports, passport cards, military or veterans identification, and other forms of Federally-issued photo ID. In addition, REAL ID does not prohibit agencies from accepting Enhanced Driver's Licenses issued by noncompliant states.

The exact list, as well as the policy for persons without an acceptable form of ID, is at the discretion of the agency.

Kentucky granted extension status under federal REAL ID Act

Driver's license all that's needed for access to most federal buildings

Driver's license all that's needed for access to most federal buildings

FRANKFORT, Ky. (July 31, 2014)— The U.S. Department of Homeland Security has added Kentucky to a growing list of states and territories granted extensions of time for meeting requirements of the stringent new identification security law known as REAL ID – meaning a Kentucky driver's license is still sufficient for gaining access to the vast majority of federal buildings.

Digital Drivers License

The extension runs through Oct. 10, 2015, and is renewable. Without the extension, those with a Kentucky driver's license would have had to produce another form of identification, such as a birth certificate or U.S. passport, for access to some federal properties.

The REAL ID Act was passed by Congress in 2005 in response to the 9/11 Commission, which recommended that the federal government "set standards for the issuance of sources of identification, such as driver's licenses."

The federal act sets minimum standards for production and issuance of state-issued driver's licenses and identification cards. It also prohibits federal agencies from accepting for official uses driver's licenses and IDs from “noncompliant” states. By virtue of being granted an extension, Kentucky is not considered to be out of compliance.

To date, 20 other states besides Kentucky have been given extensions, as have the District of Columbia and the territories of Guam, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands. Twenty-one states are listed by the Department of Homeland Security as in compliance. Nine states and American Samoa are listed as noncompliant.

“We are pleased Kentucky has been granted this extension,” said Rodney Kuhl, commissioner of the Department of Vehicle Regulation within the Kentucky Transportation Cabinet. “It underlines the progress we have made and our commitment to completing the process. In addition, it provides our driver’s license holders access to federal buildings that might otherwise be limited to them.”

Complying with REAL ID is more complicated for Kentucky than for most other states – in part because driver’s licenses are issued by circuit court clerks, not by a department of motor vehicles. There are 142 issuance locations around Kentucky – all of which would have to meet a greatly enhanced security standard. A security assessment of the local offices is in process.

The Kentucky driver’s license itself is not the issue. In fact, Kentucky in 2012 began issuing a redesigned license and ID card that include state-of-the-art security features. In notifying Gov. Steve Beshear of the extension, the Department of Homeland Security said it “recognizes your efforts in enhancing the security of your driver’s licenses and identification cards.”

REAL ID prohibits agencies from accepting driver's licenses or identification cards issued by noncompliant states for purpose of accessing a facility.

Any alternate process for access control is at the discretion of the agency based on the risk profile of the facility in question.

We recommend that you contact any agencies with whom your company works to inquire about their access control policies.

On July 23, Kentucky was granted an extension after demonstrating it has made sufficient progress in meeting the standards for the secure production and issuance of driver's licenses.

As a result, Federal agencies may now accept all Kentucky driver's licenses for the duration of the extension (October 2015 but may be renewed).

I hope this information proves helpful.

Subject: REAL ID Enforcement

As a reminder, REAL ID enforcement for all restricted facilities should begin on July 21, 2014. Restricted facilities are Federal facilities only accessible to Federal employees, contractors and their guests. If your agency oversees access to such a facility, you should be prepared to implement enforcement and collect metrics.

The REAL ID Act of 2005 prohibits Federal agencies from accepting for official purposes driver's licenses and identification cards from states not meeting the Act's minimum standards. Official purposes subject to enforcement in 2014 and 2015 are: 1) accessing Federal facilities; and 2) entering nuclear power plants.

At this point, your agency should have identified:

- Which facilities meet the definition of restricted (if you have a question on this classification, contact your facility's General Services Administration Building Manager, Federal Protective Service Inspector or the DHS Office of State Issue Identification Support);
- Whether any exemptions apply (life preserving or health services, access to courts and law enforcement, application for/receipt of Federal benefits) to any of those facilities; and
- What are your agency's policies and practices in cases where a person seeking to access the facility does not have a state-issued driver's license or identification card from a REAL ID compliant state/territory. (e.g., list of alternate acceptable identity documents, procedures when no acceptable identity document is available).

In the coming weeks, you may also wish to prepare by:

- Ensuring that your headquarters has communicated your agency's specific implementation procedures to your facility leadership;
- Preparing your employees and contractors to communicate to their guests what identification documents are acceptable for accessing your facilities ;
- Posting the attached poster and flyer at access control points;
- Training access control personnel to implement enforcement (See REAL ID Notice and FAQ for Agency Officials); and
- Ensuring you have procedures in place to submit a tally at the end of each month on enforcement encounters (See REAL ID Enforcement Tracker).

If you have any questions or need additional information, you may reach my team at OSIIS@DHS.Gov.

(b)(6)

Under the Phased Enforcement Plan, you do not need a REAL ID compliant document to enter a Federal facility. The REAL ID Act applies to documents issued by states that: (1) do not meet the minimum standards of the Act, and (2) have not been granted an extension to the enforcement deadline by DHS. REAL ID enforcement is about states, not credentials. At this time, it does not matter if the actual document is compliant nor does it matter what age you are.

That said, since Maine does not meet the minimum standards and has not been granted an extension, your Maine driver's license would not be acceptable for identification for purposes of access to a restricted Federal facility beginning July 21, 2014 under Phase II of the REAL ID Phased Enforcement Program. Restricted facilities are those requiring some form of pre-clearance before entry. In order to gain entry to a restricted facility, you need to submit identity information in advance – e.g., name, DOB, SSN, etc. If the facility you will be entering is not a restricted facility, then it may not be covered under Phase II of the REAL ID Phased Enforcement Plan. It is up to the facility security staff to decide whether or not it is a restricted facility under the provisions of the Phased Enforcement Plan.

I will be attending a meeting next week (7/30) hosted by the U.S. Department of Education at:

(b)(6)

I have received notice that I need a REAL ID compliant document to enter the building.

My state (Maine) does not participate in REAL ID and I do not have a passport. However, I believe I am exempt from the requirements until 2017 because I was born prior to December 1964.

But I do not want to have difficulty when I get to the meeting. What can I do in advance to make sure there is not a problem? Is there a person I should call at the building itself? The building houses several federal agencies and I am unclear who is in charge of security there.

Thank you very much for your assistance.

Generally speaking, most Social Security offices are not affected until January 2015 when enforcement expands to Federal facilities open to the general public but requiring an ID to access. There should be processes, at that time, to accommodate persons needing to access facilities to apply for or receive Federal benefits.

However, because circumstances may differ across the over 18,000 Federal facilities to be sure, I recommend that you contact the Social Security office that you wish to access to inquire directly what its access control requirements are.

DHS requires visitors to present government-issued identification for access to its facilities. For visitors presenting a state-issued driver's license or identification card, DHS may only accept such documents if they are issued by states that are REAL ID compliant. If the state that issued your license is listed as noncompliant, please bring an alternate form of government-issued photo ID – such as a passport or Federal employee, military, or veteran identification card to facilitate access.

Date:	2014/07/14 15:59:00

1. Will States still be allowed to issue non-compliant Drivers Licenses and Identification cards?

Yes.

REAL ID Act Section 202(d)(11) In any case in which the State issues a driver's license or identification card that does not satisfy the requirements of this section, ensure that such license or identification card--

(A) clearly states on its face that it may not be accepted by any Federal agency for federal identification or any other official purpose; and

(B) uses a unique design or color indicator to alert Federal agency and other law enforcement personnel that it may not be accepted for any such purpose.

2. When the REAL ID law states that individuals with documents from non-compliant states will not be able to board a plane or access federal services, to what type of services are we speaking, if one of the limitations of REAL ID is that it does not apply to applying or receiving Federal benefits (see REAL ID Enforcement in Brief)?

Enforcement applies to accessing Federal facilities except where exempted for the reasons specified in the REAL ID In Brief summary. For example, meetings with EPA or NASA employees at a Federal facilities are unlikely to fall under the Federal benefits exemption.

3. When the REAL ID goes into full effect, federal agencies will provide alternative procedures to individuals with non-compliant documents seeking services or to enter their facility. Will DHS provide guidance or will each agency be left to their own devices? Are we to assume that an individual will have to provide several documents instead of a compliant driver's license?

Please clarify what you mean by "full effect." As described in the REAL ID In Brief document, enforcement will be rolled out in phases, so enforcement occurs on a rolling basis.

DHS distributed guidance on enforcement back in April to all agency POCs. The SSA's POCs that should have received this document are:

REAL ID does not provide DHS with the authority to direct other agencies on what IDs they may accept in lieu of a driver's license from a noncompliant state. Your agency presumably already has an access control policy – REAL ID simply adds an additional requirement that the agency is prohibited from accepting driver's licenses from noncompliant states. For agency without an established access control policy, we asked the Interagency Security Committee to provide more specific guidance to agencies but that work has not been completed.

At DHS, we advise visitors of the following policy:

For visitors using state-issued ID to access the [facility name], only driver's licenses or identification cards from states that meet Federal standards will be honored. [Agency] will continue to accept other forms of government-issued identification, including Federal employee badges, passports, military identification cards, or Enhanced Driver's Licenses.

We also accept other Federally-issued ID such as trusted traveler cards and Transportation Workers Identification Credentials.

Generally speaking, many agencies accept other forms of government-issued IDs such as a passport or Federal employee, military, or veteran identification card.

REAL ID ENFORCEMENT IN BRIEF

The Department of Homeland Security (DHS) announced on December 20, 2013 a phased enforcement plan for the REAL ID Act (the Act), as passed by Congress, that will implement the Act in a measured, fair, and responsible way.

Secure driver's licenses and identification documents are a vital component of our national security framework. The REAL ID Act, passed by Congress in 2005, enacted the 9/11 Commission's recommendation that the Federal Government "set standards for the issuance of sources of identification, such as driver's licenses." The Act established minimum security standards for license issuance and production and prohibits Federal agencies from accepting for certain purposes driver's licenses and identification cards from states not meeting the Act's minimum standards. The purposes covered by the Act are: accessing Federal facilities, entering nuclear power plants, and, no sooner than 2016, boarding federally regulated commercial aircraft.

States and other jurisdictions have made significant progress in enhancing the security of their licenses over the last number of years. As a result, approximately 75% of all U.S. drivers hold licenses from jurisdictions: (1) determined to meet the Act's standards; or (2) that have received extensions. Individuals holding driver's licenses or identification cards from these jurisdiction may continue to use them as before. (See Section B of the sidebar).

Individuals holding licenses from noncompliant jurisdictions will need to follow alternative access control procedures for purposes covered by the Act. (See Section A of the sidebar). As described below, enforcement for boarding aircraft will occur no sooner than 2016.

- Phase 1: Restricted areas (i.e., areas accessible by agency personnel, contractors, and their guests) for DHS's Nebraska Avenue Complex (NAC) headquarters.
- Phase 2: Restricted areas for all Federal facilities and nuclear power plants.
- Phase 3: Semi-restricted areas (i.e., areas available to the general public but subject to ID-based access control) for most Federal facilities (subject to limitations described in the next section). Access to Federal facilities will continue to be allowed for purposes of applying for or receiving Federal benefits.
- Phase 4: Boarding federally regulated commercial aircraft. A driver's license or identification card from a noncompliant state may only be used in conjunction with an acceptable second form of ID for boarding federally regulated commercial aircraft.

DHS will conduct an evaluation following the implementation of the first three phases to assess the effects of enforcement and the progress of states in meeting the standards of the act. Before a date for Phase 4 is set, DHS will conduct an evaluation to inform a fair and achievable timeline. The date for implementing Phase 4 will be set after the evaluation has been complete; this phase will occur no sooner than 2016. The evaluation will also be used to inform the nature and timing of subsequent phases and to inform the pathway to full enforcement. DHS will ensure the public has ample advanced notice before identification requirements for boarding aircraft or entering additional types of Federal facilities change.

Phase	Enforcement	Notification Period	Full Enforcement
1	Restricted areas for DHS/NAC	1/20/14	04/21/14
2	Restricted areas for all Federal facilities & for nuclear power plants	04/21/14	07/21/14
3	Semi-restricted for all Federal facilities	10/20/14	01/19/15
Review and Evaluation
4	Aircraft (Acceptable with 2nd form of ID)	No sooner than 2016

LIMITATIONS

Access for activities directly relating to safety and health or life preserving services, to law enforcement, and to constitutionally protected activities, including legal and investigative proceedings will not be affected. Existing agency policies will still apply.

The Act does not require individuals to present identification where it is not currently required to access a Federal facility (such as to enter the public areas of the Smithsonian) nor does it prohibit an agency from accepting other forms of identity documents other than documents from non-compliant states (such as a U.S. passport or passport card).

The Act's prohibitions do not affect other uses of driver's licenses or identification cards – including licenses and cards from noncompliant states – unrelated to official purposes as defined in the Act. For example, the Act does not apply to voting, registering to vote, or for applying for or receiving Federal benefits.

No. DHS has not found Arizona to meet the Federal minimum standards for issuance and production of driver's licenses since April 2014.

Arizona is one of only two jurisdictions that have not submitted any information about its driver's license security program. Consequently, there is no information on which DHS could evaluate whether Arizona might qualify for an extension or a finding of compliance.

In accordance with the phased enforcement schedule published on the DHS website, Federal agencies are prohibited from accepting Arizona driver's licenses or identification cards for purpose of entry into a Federal facility.

I hope this information proves helpful.

Homeland Security

Notice to Access Control Officials for Federal Facilities

You are receiving this message because you have been identified as having a role in your agency's access control policies. Starting April 21, 2014, the Federal Government will begin phasing in enforcement of the REAL ID Act of 2005 ("the Act") (P.L. 109-13). Consequently, agencies are advised that they will have new responsibilities related to this enforcement.

Definition

Under the Act, agencies can only accept a state-issued driver's license or identification card for access to Federal facilities if issued by states that are REAL ID compliant or have an extension.

As of April 2014, all but 12 states and territories have been either found compliant, or have made sufficient progress to qualify for an extension – meaning agencies may continue to accept their licenses. The jurisdictions that do NOT meet the REAL ID standards are: Alaska, American Samoa, Arizona, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Montana, New York, Oklahoma, and Washington State. DHS is continuing to receive information from states and assess on an ongoing basis whether additional states may be found in compliance or eligible for extension. For a list of the compliant and non-compliant states and additional information on REAL ID, go to <https://www.dhs.gov/secure-drivers-licenses>.

The Act does not require individuals to present identification where it is not currently required to access a Federal facility (such as to enter the public areas of the Smithsonian) nor does it affect agencies accepting non-state-issued IDs (such as a HSPD-12 card or U.S. passport).

Compliance

If your building requires ID to be presented at an access point, consult the list of acceptable IDs for entrance. Any state-issued ID must be from compliant states (including states with extensions). Facilities that do not require presentation of a photo ID are not affected.

At the building level, you may contact the General Services Administration (GSA) building manager, the Federal Protective Services (FPS) inspector and/or the FPS contract guards who are available to the Designated Official and the Facility Security Committee for information on REAL ID.

Exceptions

A visitor may present any form of ID, even a state ID from a non-compliant state if a visitor is gaining access to a federal building for one or more the following reasons:

- Safety, health, or life preserving services;
- Law enforcement and legal hearings; or
- The application or receipt of Federal benefits.

If your agency requires the presentation of an ID at an access point at these facilities for a purpose other than access control, these policies are not affected by REAL ID enforcement.

Next Steps

The Department of Homeland Security (DHS) is serving as an interagency coordinator on this issue. DHS will provide ongoing guidance to agencies on REAL ID Enforcement (See attachments).

Please email (b)(6) with the name and contact information of the individual who will serve as your agency's point of contact to receive information about REAL ID enforcement. Please provide name, title, email address, and phone number.

Note: To understand how your agency will be affected, please take the time to consider:

- How many of your agency's facilities would qualify as:
 - Restricted (i.e., areas accessible only by agency personnel, contractors, and their guests)?
 - Semi-restricted (i.e., areas available to the general public but subject to ID-based access control)?
 - Note: Facilities that do not require presentation of a photo ID are not affected.
- If your agency requires the presentation of an ID at an access point at these facilities, is it for access control or for some other purpose?
 - For example, DHS uses the presented identification card to validate that the individual seeking entry is the same individual who have been vetted against security watchlists. This use is an element of DHS' access control process.
 - In contrast, another department uses the presented identification to have a record of who has entered the building in case of an emergency. This use is NOT an element of that department's access control policy and would not be affected by REAL ID enforcement.

Additional Background

Congress passed REAL ID to enact the 9/11 Commission's recommendation that the Federal Government "set standards for the issuance of sources of identification, such as driver's licenses." It establishes minimum standards for issuance and production of driver's licenses and prohibits Federal agencies from accepting for certain purposes licenses from states not meeting the Act's minimum standards. The purposes covered include: accessing Federal facilities, entering nuclear power plants, and boarding federally regulated commercial aircraft. An Interagency Policy Committee, led by the National Security Council Staff, developed a schedule to phase-in enforcement of this law incrementally over several phases. This plan, released on December 20, 2013, can be found at <http://www.dhs.gov/publication/real-id-enforcement-brief>.

For additional information, see <http://www.dhs.gov/secure-drivers-licenses> or email osiis@dhs.gov.

REAL ID ENFORCEMENT TRAINING AID AND FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

AGENCY OFFICIALS

Please be advised that as of April 21, 2014, new access control requirements will begin applying to Federal facilities government-wide in compliance with the REAL ID Act (Act). Federal Agencies will no longer be able to accept driver's licenses and identification cards for purpose of access to their facilities unless the ID is issued by a state meets the Act's minimum security standards. Access control personnel will be expected to be aware of how this requirement applies to their facility, which states issue acceptable identification, and what to communicate to persons presenting unacceptable identification.

The REAL ID Act, passed by Congress in 2005, enacted the 9/11 Commission's recommendation that the Federal Government "set standards for the issuance of sources of identification, such as driver's licenses." Secure driver's licenses and identification documents are a vital component of our national security framework. The Act directs the Department of Homeland Security to establish minimum security standards for license issuance and production and to determine when a state meets these standards.

Visitors wishing to access Federal facilities using a state-issued driver's license or identification card may do so only if the document is issued by a REAL ID compliant state (see Question #5 below for more information on the status of individual states). Your agency may continue to accept other forms of government-issued identification such as a Federal employee badge, passport, military identification, or Enhanced Driver's License in accordance with your facilities policies.

As of April 21, 2014, the Act applies only to restricted Federal facilities (i.e., facilities only accessible to Federal employees, contractors, and their guests) and nuclear power plants. In January 2015, it will expand to all Federal facilities where the check of identification documents is part of the facility's access control process. Access for activities directly relating to safety and health or life preserving services, to the application or receipt of Federal benefits, or to law enforcement, legal, and investigative proceedings are not affected; existing agency policies will still apply.

Enforcement begins on April 21 with a three-month notification period where individuals presenting driver's licenses from states subject to enforcement are provided warnings but the agency may still accept the license. At the end of the notification period, such licenses may not be accepted and you should follow any alternate procedures established by your agency.

Q1. Why is this change happening?

A: The REAL ID Act was passed by Congress and applies to all Federal agencies.

Q2. What types of Federal facilities are affected?

A: REAL ID will ultimately affect all Federal facilities that have access control requirements involving ID checks. Facilities accessible by agency personnel, contractors, and their guests begin the 3-month notification period on April 21, 2014 and full enforcement on July 21, 2014. Facilities accessible to the general public but subject to ID-based access control begin the notification period on October 20, 2014 and full enforcement on January 19, 2015.

Q3. Does REAL ID affect us if my facility already has a secure process for access control?

A: Yes. The REAL ID Act does not exempt agencies that otherwise have secure access programs.

Q4. If my agency does not check IDs for access to our facilities, will we need to start?

A: No. REAL ID only affects access control policies where access may be granted based on presentation of a driver's license or identification card. It does not require agencies to institute new ID checks where none already exist.

Q5. Which states are affected?

A: The REAL ID Act covers driver's licenses and identification cards issued by the 50 states, the District of Columbia, and five U.S. territories (Puerto Rico, American Samoa, Northern Marianas, Guam, and the U.S. Virgin Islands).

DHS maintains a definitive list of jurisdictions subject to enforcement at <http://www.dhs.gov/secure-drivers-licenses#1>. As of April 21, 2014, the following states are subject to enforcement:

Alaska	Louisiana	Montana
American Samoa	Maine	New York+
Arizona	Massachusetts	Oklahoma
Kentucky	Minnesota+	Washington+

+ Federal officials may continue to accept Enhanced Driver's Licenses (EDL) from these states. EDLs are identifiable by the American Flag on the face of the card. <http://www.dhs.gov/enhanced-drivers-licenses-what-are-they>

Q6. How do I determine which driver's licenses and identification cards are REAL ID compliant?

A: You simply need to determine whether the card was issued by a state subject to enforcement (see Question #5).

Q7. Can Federal agencies accept driver's licenses marked "Not for Federal Identification Purposes" or some similar phrase?

Yes, until further notice. Most states are in a transitional phase and have not completed issuing REAL ID compliant cards to their residents. REAL ID prohibitions only apply to driver's licenses and identification cards issued by the states subject to enforcement (see Question #5).

Q8. How does enforcement work?

During the 3-month notification period beginning April 21, you should inform individuals attempting to use driver's licenses from a state subject to enforcement about the new policy but still allow access.

After the notification period is over, you are prohibited from accepting driver's licenses issued by a state subject to enforcement as identification to enter your facility. Please advise the visitor of other forms of acceptable ID or what your facility's alternate procedures for persons without an acceptable ID.

Q9. How do I answer if a visitor asks why REAL ID is necessary?

A: As directed by Congress, REAL ID supports efforts to enhance the security driver's licenses and identification documents, which are a vital component of our national security framework. The REAL ID Act enacted the 9/11 Commission's recommendation that the Federal Government "set standards for the issuance of sources of identification, such as driver's licenses."

Q10. What do I tell a visitor who presents a driver's license or identification card from a state subject to enforcement?

A: When presented with an unacceptable ID, you should explain to the individual that REAL ID enforcement precludes its acceptance and advise what alternative procedures are in place (e.g., other forms of acceptable ID).

Q11. How should I answer questions about how someone can obtain a REAL ID driver's license?

A: Please refer them to the driver's license issuing agency for their state. Each state chooses whether to meet the REAL ID standards. The Federal Government cannot mandate compliance.

Q12. Do I need to keep records when a visitor presents a driver's licenses or identification cards from non-compliant jurisdictions?

A: Yes. Each agency should keep data on the volume of encounters with driver's licenses holders from states subject to enforcement and transmit totals by state to DHS at OSIIS@dhs.gov at the end of each month using the procedures described by your supervisor. For REAL ID purposes, agencies should not capture the personal identifying information of driver's license holders. DHS will aggregate the reported data to measure the impact of REAL ID enforcement.

Q13. Can I reject or provide extra scrutiny to a particular identification document based upon an individual's real or perceived race, ethnicity (including limited English proficiency), national origin, immigration status, or religious beliefs?

A: No. The standard for acceptance of an identity document is the same for all persons seeking access to a federal facility or a nuclear power plant, or for boarding a commercial air flight, regardless of race, ethnicity, limited English proficiency, national origin, immigration status or religious beliefs.

To: Agency Personnel

As of April 21, 2014, [Agency] will be instituting new access control procedures that may affect visitors to the [facility name].

For visitors using state-issued ID to access the [facility name], only driver's licenses or identification cards from states that meet Federal standards will be honored. [Agency] will continue to accept other forms of government-issued identification, including Federal employee badges, passports, military identification cards, or Enhanced Driver's Licenses. If visitors don't have acceptable identity documents, hosts will need to provide escort in order for the visitor to access the [facility name].

These changes are the result of the Federal Government's enforcement of the REAL ID Act that enacts one of the key recommendations of the 9/11 Commission. The Act establishes minimum security standards for state-issued driver licenses and identification cards and prohibits Federal agencies from accepting for official purposes those documents unless DHS determines that the state meets the minimum standards.

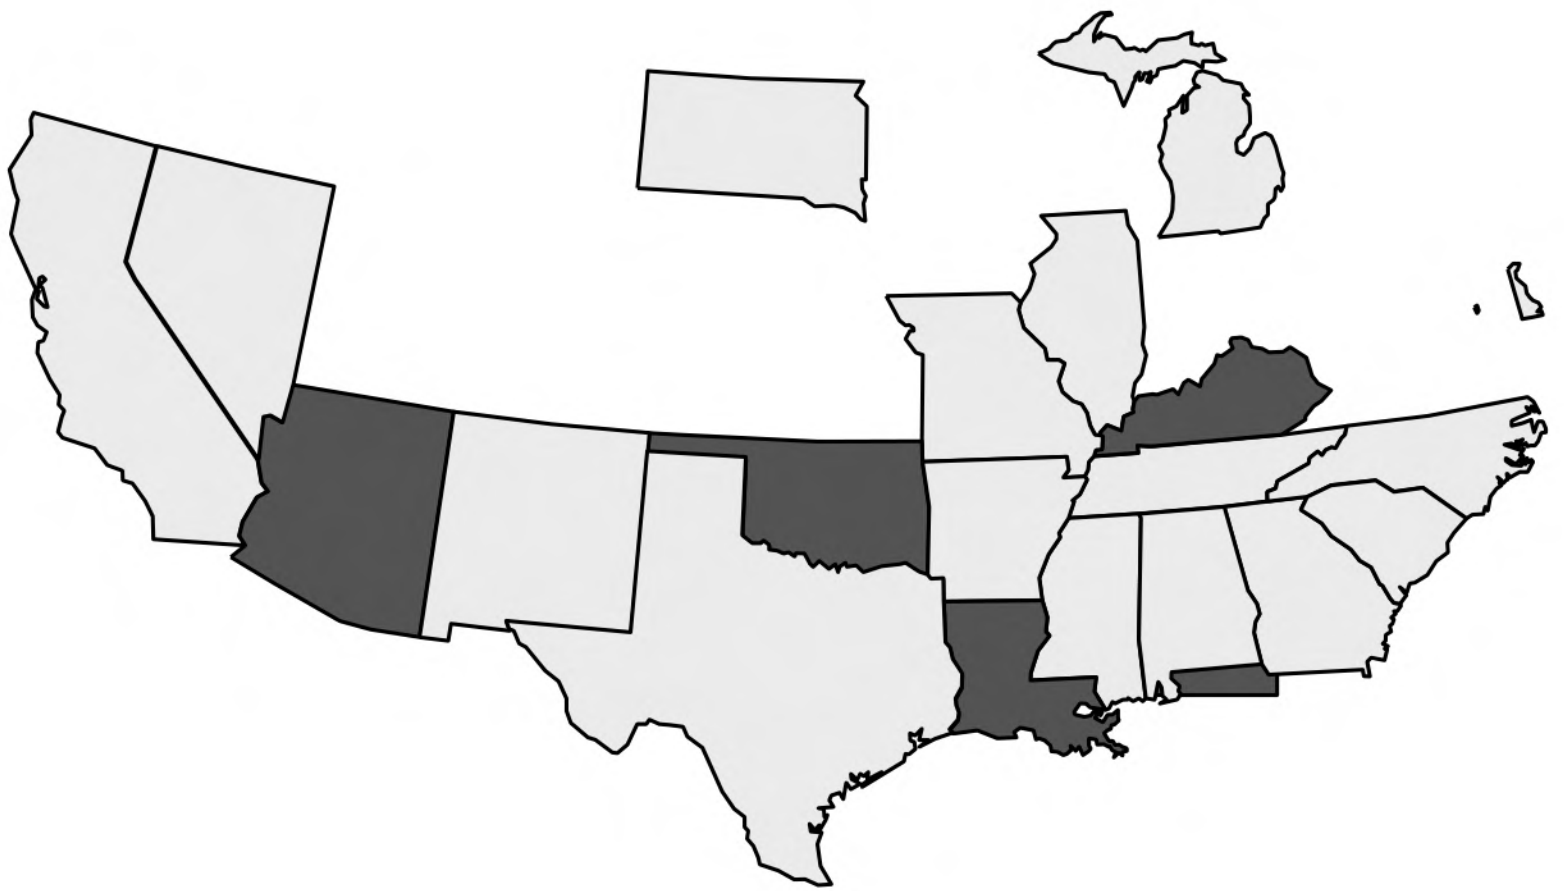

As of April 21, the following jurisdictions do NOT meet the REAL ID standards: Alaska, American Samoa, Arizona, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Montana, New York, Oklahoma, and Washington State. Visitors to the [facility name] with identification from these jurisdictions must present alternate forms of identification to facilitate access. As this list is subject to change, please check for the most up-to-date information.

To avoid confusion and expedite access procedures for visitors, employees should inform visitors in advance of these changes to ensure they have appropriate identification upon their arrival. When inviting guests, we recommend including the following language in your message:

[AGENCY] requires visitors to present government-issued identification for access to its facilities. For visitors presenting a state-issued driver's license or identification card, [AGENCY] may only accept such documents if they are issued by states that are REAL ID compliant. If the state that issued your license is listed as noncompliant, please bring an alternate form of government-issued photo ID – such as a passport or Federal employee, military, or veteran identification card to facilitate access.

For additional information about the REAL ID Act, please visit www.dhs.gov/secure-drivers-licenses.

Thank you for your assistance in ensuring a smooth transition.

Subject: Phased Enforcement Plan for Federal Agencies

Dear Sir or Madam,

I am writing for clarification on the phased enforcement plan for REAL ID released by DHS in December 2013. Can you point me to the regulation that lays out the enforcement plan? I am researching agencies' general response to REAL ID and want to clarify which deadline for not accepting non-compliant IDs applies in each scenario. The most current regulation I can find, 6 C.F.R. 37.5, states a deadline for 12/1/14 while the enforcement plan on the DHS website lists deadlines as early as this month. The DHS website does not cite any specific regulation.

You are receiving this message because you have been identified as having a role in your agency's access control policies. Starting April 21, 2014, the Federal Government will begin phasing in enforcement of the REAL ID Act of 2005 ("the Act") (P.L. 109-13). Consequently, agencies are advised that they will have new responsibilities related to this enforcement.

To provide agencies with sufficient time to transition to the new policies, April 21, 2014 marks the beginning of a 3-month notification period. Until this period ends on July 21, 2014, agencies are only responsible for informing visitors of the coming changes and providing DHS with metrics of number of encounters. Agencies may continue to use their current access control

Dear Ms. (b)(6)

The REAL ID regulation requires that the name on the license match the name on the identity source document, unless the applicant provides official documentation of a name change. The regulation leaves it entirely up to the states to decide what name change documentation – e.g., marriage certificates, divorce decrees, court orders, social security administration name change, etc. – may be accepted. The REAL ID standards are only minimum standards, however, and states may choose to exceed those standards as they wish.

In your inquiry, you are asserting that the name suggested by the State of Florida appears on none of the identity documents you presented and that all of the documents you did present were consistent. The REAL ID regulation allows (but does not require) states to use an exceptions process to the naming standard in cases where an individual has established and consistently used an identity over time that does not match the name on their original birth certificate. How and when to use an exceptions process is at the discretion of the state. We recommend that you contact the Florida Department of Motor Vehicles to ask if the use of an exceptions process would be appropriate in your case.

We hope that this information proves helpful.

Dear Mr. (b)(6)

Thank you for your question.

Under REAL ID, Federal agencies may not accept driver's licenses for official Federal purposes (including accessing Federal facilities) unless issued by a state that DHS has found to meet the requirements of the REAL ID Act and regulations. New York currently has not been found to meet these requirements and agencies may not accept licenses issued by New York in accordance with the phased enforcement plan published on our website.

REAL ID applies to state-issued driver's licenses and identification cards with the exception of Enhanced Driver's Licenses. Agencies have been advised that REAL ID does not apply to Enhanced Driver's License. Please be aware that the decision of what forms of identification an agency may accept in lieu of a driver's license is outside the scope of REAL ID. Each agency ultimately determines that list based on their own internal policies and procedures.

We recommend that you contact the specific Federal agency you plan to visit to determine what forms of identification they will accept or what alternative procedures it may have to grant access to its facilities where a person does not have a form of identification.

If you have any additional questions, please contact us at osiis@hq.dhs.gov.

Thank you,

Ted Sobel

Thank you for your inquiry.

Please consult with the Florida Department of Highway Safety and Motor Vehicles for the latest information on DHS plans to postpone the regulatory deadlines of December 1, 2014 and December 1, 2017 for document-based enforcement. Dear (b)(6)

As the REAL ID Enforcement in Brief memo indicates, certain Federal facilities may not accept standard New York State driver's licenses and identification cards as proof of identity for access beginning on July 21, 2014. Please contact the specific Federal facility you plan to enter to make sure that this new policy applies to that facility. The policy lists a number of exceptions, including activities directly relating to safety and health or life preserving services, law enforcement, and constitutionally protected activities such legal and investigative proceedings. If the facility does plan to enforce this provision of the REAL ID Act, we recommend that you also ask what alternative documents or procedures the facility will follow in the event that a New York driver's license or identification card is presented for purposes of access.

However, REAL ID Enforcement does not change identification requirements for accessing individual Federal facilities in any other way. It does not change what identification documents facilities will accept and it does not impose any new identification requirements where none currently exist. Federal facilities may or may not accept Enhanced Driver's Licenses issued by the State of New York based upon their internal policies and procedures.

If you have any additional questions, please contact us at osiis@hq.dhs.gov.

Hello. I got your e-mail address from the Homeland Security "Real ID Enforcement In Brief" web page, as I have a question re: the Real ID Compliant requirements. I live in Orange County, FL, and our Tax Collector's newsletter, as well as their website, state that "everyone" must be Real ID compliant by the end of 2014, even if your license does not expire until a later year. A co-worker of mine found an outdated webpage on this matter that stated ONLY those born AFTER December 1, 1964 have to renew by the end of 2014, and anyone born BEFORE December 1, 1964 have until December 1, 2017 to renew. I have searched every website I can find on this matter, and have had a lengthy conversation with our Orange County Tax Collector's, and we cannot find that deadline verbiage anywhere!

Can someone with the State of Florida or Homeland Security please clear this up for me? I want to educate everyone at our office on this matter, and I don't want to send incorrect information. Our Tax Collector's Office said this is very important information for entering government buildings, flying commercial aircraft, etc., so the correct information NEEDS to get both on our State website(s) and all applicable County websites, as well. Thank you!

Subject: RE: Questions about REAL ID Act Enforcement

(b)(6)

I have had a lot of discussion with (b)(6) about the impact on APHIS. So you may find that he has already has some results from his research that he can share with you.

About your specific questions:

- The enforcement dates are accurate and have not changed.
- Regarding guidance for facilities, we provided each Department with the attached document that can be adapted to your specific needs.
- I have copied (b)(6) with FPS regarding your question about FPS instructions.

Let me know what else I can help you with.

Subject: RE: Question about the PASS (passport card)

REAL ID mandates that Federal agencies are prohibited from accepting a state-issued driver's license or ID for purpose of entering Federal facilities unless the state meets the security standards of the REAL ID Act and regulations. It does not mandate a list of what agencies may accept in lieu of a license, so the list of acceptable documents is at the discretion of each agency.

However, in general, most agencies do accept Federally-issued ID, including the PASS card, in lieu of a driver's license.

To be certain, I recommend that you contact the agency or facility about which you are specifically concerned to inquire whether they accept a PASS card for entering their facility.

Hello,

I was wondering if the PASS (Passport card) would work the same way as the Star ID for within the states traveling and so to get into some of the locations, i.e. nuclear power plants, or even some semi-restricted areas.

I could not find this information if and it was somewhere could you point me to the location. I understand that a passport will work for flying but what about the Semi-restricted areas, or restricted areas.

Thank you for taking the time to read this email and getting back with me.

REAL ID prohibits Federal agencies from accepting a state-issued driver's license or ID for purpose of entering Federal facilities unless the state meets the security standards of the REAL ID Act and regulations. REAL ID does not mandate a list of alternate forms of ID that an agency may accept in lieu of a license. Each Federal agency establishes that list for its own facilities based on its own policies.

In general, most agencies do accept Federally-issued ID (including passports) in lieu of a driver's license. To be certain, however, I recommend that you contact the agency or facility about which you are specifically concerned to inquire whether they accept a Passport to enter their facility.

Subject: Homeland Security Real ID Act

Hello,

I am in the process of managing a project being performed at Original Home Base CIA Headquarters for a renovation in the kitchen area. The company I work for is a subcontractor on this project. I am in the process of obtaining my quarterly approval for access. However, I live in the state of Kentucky which is listed as a Noncompliant State/Territories.

Per reading information provided to me (attached), I request clarification per the section of Limitations paragraph 2, "nor does it prohibit an agency from accepting other forms of identit documents other than documents from non-compliant states (such as U.S. passport or passport card)."

Does this mean that as long as I present my Kentucky issued driver's license along with my U.S. Passport, I would be given access to the affected locations under this act?

Thanks,

Dear XXXX,

The REAL ID Act sets minimum standards for issuance of state driver's licenses and identification cards for states that choose to meet these standards.

These are minimum standards and states may choose to exceed these standards -- that is, establish additional standards not included in the Act and the REAL ID regulation.

DHS has determined that Florida meets the minimum standards of the Act. Florida has been issuing compliant documents since January 2010.

Nevada has not submitted a certification package to DHS and has not been determined by DHS to be compliant with the Act. Nevada is not a compliant state.

With respect to legal name, the REAL ID regulation requires that the name on the license matches the identity document presented -- for example, birth certificate, passport, or REAL ID compliant driver's license issued by a compliant state. If the name differs from that on the identity document presented then the applicant may present name change documentation as determined by the issuing state -- for example, marriage certificate, divorce decree, etc. Finally, compliant states may use a documented exception process in cases where identity documents such as a birth certificate are not available.

However, the State of Nevada, should it so choose, may impose additional requirements beyond these minimum standards of the REAL ID Act and regulation.

If you have any additional questions, please let us know.

Thank you,

If a person moves from another state, that is under compliance, to a state that is under compliance, do they have to make a name change, giving up their MAIDEN name and being REQUIRED, to use their middle name, given at birth.

The person is neither getting married or divorced, simply moving from the state of FL to NV and wishes to receive a drivers license from the new state in which they will now be residing. The person presented a birth certificate and many pieces of ID. Their name has been the same for 40 years. Every legal document, including a trust, bank documents, home ownership papers etc have the name the person used for 40 years. This has created a nightmare for this person to have to change all these important documents after 40 years, just to obtain a drivers license.

Please explain. She wants to comply but this is a very big deal to change all these pieces of ID just because of a change of residence.

An exact date has not been set for enforcement of prohibitions against accepting licenses from noncompliant states for purposes of boarding Federally-regulated commercial aircraft.

The reference to December 1, 2014 is based on a milestone that was in a 2008 regulation for states to have completed issuing compliant licenses to persons under 50 years of age. In a December 20, 2013 letter to all governors, DHS announced its intent to amend that date to align it with other future milestones. DHS is currently in the process of formalizing that proposed change.

Consequently, the statement on our website of "no sooner than 2016" for air travel is correct.

Subject: Clarification Request - REAL-ID Compliant Document to Board a Plane

Gentlemen,

I work with a number of people who frequently travel by plane. I am asking for your guidance and clarification on the issue of boarding airplanes using a REAL-ID compliant document. Specifically, when will the REAL-ID compliant document go into effect as it relates to boarding domestic flights?

My place of employment is in Birmingham, Alabama. According to the fourth paragraph in the following link (Alabama Department of Public Safety website)
<http://dps.alabama.gov/Home/wfContent.aspx?ID=80&PLH1=plhDriverLicense-StarIDNewsRelease>:

"All current Alabama drivers licenses and non-driver ID cards will be accepted for official federal purposes until December 1, 2014. Beginning on that date, however, individuals born after December 1, 1964, will be required to have a REAL-ID-compliant document* to board a domestic flight. . ."

The Homeland Security document "Real ID Enforcement in Brief" (http://www.dhs.gov/sites/default/files/publications/REAL-ID-IN-Brief-20140418_5.pdf) would seem to indicate the REAL-ID compliant document will not be required in order to board a domestic flight before 2016.

I spoke with the Alabama State Examiner today and was told, according to the information they have been provided, travelers will need the compliant document in order to board a flight beginning December 1, 2014.

Information on the DHS website contradicts what is on the Alabama Dept of Public Safety site. I wonder if Alabama operates under other guidelines and uses dates other than those provided by DHS.

Can you please clarify? Will the staff in my office (born after 12/1/64) be able to board a flight after Dec 1, 2014 without a new REAL-ID compliant document? For those people enrolled in TSA PreCheck, will they also be required to have a REAL-ID compliant document?

Your response is greatly appreciated.

So even though we're gov't funded and house DoD personnel, since our physical building structure isn't a Federal facility, we don't fall under the Act - Is this correct? RE: DHS Announces Real ID Enforcement Plans

On December 20, the U.S. Department of Homeland Security (DHS) announced the phased enforcement plan for the Real ID Act of 2005. DHS notes that enforcement measures will occur in phases, and that each enforcement measure is cumulative, with measures in each phase remaining in effect through successive phases. Each phase will begin with a 3-month period where agencies will provide notice to individuals attempting to use driver's licenses or identification cards from noncompliant states but still allow access. After this period is over, agencies will no longer accept such identification for entry to Federal facilities, and individuals will need to follow the agency's alternate procedures (to be made available by the agency).

The phases are as follows:

- Phase 1 – Restricted areas (i.e. areas accessible by agency personnel, contractors and their guests) for DHS’s Nebraska Avenue Complex headquarters
 - Notification Period – January 20, 2014
 - Full Enforcement – April 21, 2014
- Phase 2 – Restricted areas for all Federal facilities and nuclear power plants
 - Notification Period – April 21, 2014
 - Full Enforcement – July 21, 2014
- Phase 3 – Semi-restricted areas (i.e. areas available to the general public but subject to ID based access control) for most Federal facilities (subject to limitations described in the memo). Access to Federal facilities will continue to be allowed for purposes of applying for or receiving Federal benefits.
 - Notification Period – October 20, 2014
 - Full Enforcement – January 19, 2015
- Phase 4 – Boarding federally regulated commercial aircraft. A driver’s license or identification card from a noncompliant state may only be used in conjunction with an acceptable second form of ID for boarding federally regulated commercial aircraft.
 - No sooner than 2016

DHS will conduct an evaluation following the implementation of the first three phases to assess the effects of enforcement and the progress of states in meeting the standards of the Act. Before a date for Phase 4 is set, DHS will conduct an evaluation to inform a fair and achievable timeline, with a date set after the evaluation process is complete. Phase 4 will occur no sooner than 2016.

The attached memo fully describes DHS’ intent. DHS notes that they are available to talk with states if they have any questions or concerns about the phased enforcement plan, DHS-granted extensions for compliance, or anything else covered in the attached announcement.

AAMVA will be scheduling a webinar with DHS officials early in the year for members to ask questions and further discuss this announcement.

REAL ID ENFORCEMENT IN BRIEF

The Department of Homeland Security (DHS) announced on December 20, 2013 the phased enforcement plan for the REAL ID Act 2005 (the Act) that will allow the Federal Government to implement the Act in a measured, fair, and responsible way.

Secure driver's licenses and identification documents are a vital component of our national security framework. Federal officials and law enforcement personnel must be able to rely on government-issued identification documents and know that the bearer of such a document is who he or she claims to be. The REAL ID Act, passed by Congress in 2005, enacted the 9/11 Commission's recommendation that the Federal Government "set standards for the issuance of sources of identification, such as driver's licenses." The Act established minimum security standards for license issuance and production and prohibits Federal agencies from accepting for certain purposes driver's licenses and identification cards from states not meeting the Act's minimum standards. The purposes covered by the Act are: accessing Federal facilities, entering nuclear power plants, and, no sooner than 2016, boarding federally regulated commercial aircraft.

States and other jurisdictions have made significant progress in enhancing the security of their licenses over the last number of years. As a result, approximately 75% of all U.S. drivers hold licenses from jurisdictions: (1) determined to meet the Act's standards; or (2) that have received extensions. Individuals holding driver's licenses or identification cards from these jurisdiction may continue to use them as before. (See Section B of the sidebar).

Individuals holding licenses from noncompliant jurisdictions will need to follow alternative access control procedures for purposes covered by the Act. (See Section A of the sidebar). As described below, enforcement for boarding aircraft will occur no sooner than 2016.

DESCRIPTION AND SCHEDULE OF ENFORCEMENT PHASES

The following enforcement measures are cumulative, with measures in each phase remaining in effect through successive phases. Each phase will begin with a 3-month period where agencies will provide notice to individuals attempting use driver's licenses or identification cards from noncompliant states but still allow access. After this period is over, agencies will no longer accept such identification for entry to Federal facilities, and individuals will need to follow the agency's alternate procedures (to be made available by the agency).

+ Federal officials may continue to accept Enhanced Driver's Licenses from these states.

* Has an extension through October 10, 2014(renewable)

Dear (b)(6)

Thank you for contacting us with your question about which REAL ID standards are and are not currently being met by Montana. Please accept my apologies for the delayed response as I mistakenly thought that this reply was sent in January..

The REAL ID Regulation establishes minimum standards for the issuance of secure driver's licenses and identification cards in order to allow Federal agencies to accept these documents for entering Federal facilities and other such purposes. The Department of Homeland Security (DHS) works with states to provide any technical assistance necessary to assist them in meeting these standards and reviews information provided by states to determine whether the standards are being met.

As a security precaution, DHS does not release to third parties information that might reveal sensitive data about a state's policies and procedures for issuing driver's licenses and identification cards. Instead, we provide our findings about each state to its government and then defer to the state to decide what is appropriate for public release. We respectfully suggest that you redirect any questions about which provisions of the regulation that Montana is or is not currently meeting to the Montana Motor Vehicle Division.

For more information about REAL ID, you may wish to visit our website. <http://www.dhs.gov/secure-drivers-licenses>. We have posted a description of REAL ID, answers to frequently asked questions, and links to key regulatory documents.

Thank you again for contacting us and for your understanding regarding the delay in responding.

Subject: Drivers license(DL) identifiers

To who it may concern,

I am in the United States Air Force and control entry and issue passes onto a Federal installation. Is there a list of DL's identifiers for which I can view to ensure the individuals DL is compliant?

Mientras que nos hemos fijado la fecha para la aplicación de la ley REAL ID en los aeropuertos no comenzará hasta el 22 de enero de 2018. Una tarjeta compatible REAL ID no tomará el lugar del pasaporte si viaja por el mundo .

Puede encontrar una lista aceptable de las identificaciones para los viajes en avión de TSA aquí:

<http://www.tsa.gov/traveler-information/acceptable-ids>

Si un niño es menor de 18 años , que no están obligados a tener una identificación para viajar. Ellos sólo necesitan su tarjeta de embarque .

You can find an acceptable list of ID's for airline travel from TSA here:

If a child is younger than 18, they are not required to have ID to travel. They'll just need their boarding pass.

Aloha,

I am a USA citizen with a REAL-ID Hawaii license, and I was wondering if this satisfies the enhanced license requirement specifically to go into Canada and back. I also have my birth certificate.

I'm more wondering about re-entering the USA after my trip. We are driving to Canada and back through Niagara Falls.

Thank you!!

Good Mooring. I work with a community with different problem that they present to mi. one situation is that I have persons that are trying to establish there status.

When they rent they need to connect to different utilities like Warter. The city requires Real ID to connect the utilities.

They have a valet passport and/or Non-profit Organization ID with: Photo, DOB, signature, address and date of issue and date of expirer.

I need information if they can use the passport and/or Non-profit Organization ID to connect the utilities.

Thank You for your attention

- Question #1 how much will this new ID cost each person?
- #2 how often will they need to be replaced?
- #3 how do they differ from the drivers licenses currently issued? Do they contain pictures, finger prints, blood types???
- #4 what agency will be authorized to issue such an ID, please not the RMV
- #5 is this really necessary as we have soc sec cards, drivers licenses, transits passes, work ID's, medicare cards, insurance cards and on and on!!!!

Thank you for reading this rant.

Thank you for contacting the Office of State Issued ID Support.

You will need to contact your state division of motor vehicles regarding the issuance of REAL ID compliant documents. While we have set the date for REAL ID enforcement at the airports this will not begin until Jan. 22, 2018.

A REAL ID compliant card will not take the place of the passport if traveling Internationally.

Also without a REAL ID compliant identification you may not be able to enter federal facilities.

Good morning,

I received a new license in the state of Wisconsin at the end of March 2016, and it says Not for Federal Purposes on the upper righthand corner of my driver's license. It wasn't mentioned to me at the time that I had the option of receiving a REAL ID, so I proceeded with a regular driver's license. Will I be able to fly domestically for the time being until all travelers must present a REAL ID in January 2020? I am flying to Seattle in two weeks and am concerned that my license will not be acceptable, and I unfortunately do not have a passport. Any help/advice you can provide me is much appreciated.

Thank you for your assistance!

Dear Sir or Madam;

I have gone over, and read all the Q&A in reference to the "Real ID". I understand all that was written. However, no place in any of the explanations or the Q&A sections (the DHS and my home state NH) did I say anything that indicated that I could use the Real ID to cross the border into Canada. Could you please clear this question up for me? Thank you in advance for your time, and I hope to hear from you soon.

Regards;
